PIAZZA PESCATORE

In the early 1900s, Italians, primarily from Genoa, Italy and Sicily were drawn to California by the climate and the similarity to their homeland. Many of those who adopted San Diego's Little Italy as their new home made their livelihood from fishing, and toiled to build San Diego into the center of the world's tuna industry until the 1970s. The Little Italy Association of San Diego wants to construct Piazza Pescatore to tell the story of the fishing industry with a bronze statue of a fisherman, and a tiled fountain with tables, chairs and umbrellas that look out onto a permanent view of the bay.
